His Ways Are Not Our Ways

Bill Brinkworth

Sometimes, as a Christian, we get confused and distraught by the way circumstances in our life seem to be out of God's control. We get perplexed over situations in our life that appear to be severely altering what we thought was a good life. Our desired path gets changed to one we never dreamed we would travel, and certainly do not understand.

A doctor may have given a disastrous diagnosis; a house may appear to be soon lost because of our inability to meet payments; children that have been raised the best way we knew, seemingly are not turning out the way we desired; all that we saved and planned for is lost because of our lack of being able to obtain employment. Our life and plans are in turmoil, and we wonder, "Where is God in all this chaos?"

These feelings are not unique. Other faithful believers have also found themselves going down a pathway they never dreamed they would travel. Millions previously have also pondered, “Why is this happening to me? What have I done to deserve this?” Remember the trials of:

- Joshua: Six times Joshua and the Israelite army silently marched around the city of Jericho. God promised Israel would get the victory over the fortress, yet they were not to say or do anything but walk around the city. On the seventh day they were told to shout and blow trumpets. A seemingly illogical action resulted in something unexpected happening; the walls of the city came supernaturally tumbling down, so the enemy could easily be conquered.
- Ezekiel. He was told by God to do some very bizarre things. The prophet did all he was told to do. Some of the tasks were humiliating to him, but he still did as he was instructed.
- Paul. This man of God was told to reach the lost with the saving message of the Gospel. He did as God bid him, yet he faced beatings, attempts on his life, imprisonment, shipwrecks, and many other perils (II Cor. 11:23-27).
- Jesus. God’s Son was the long-awaited fulfillment to many Old Testament prophecies. However, when Jesus did come He was not welcomed by many. He suffered humiliation, ridicule, cruelty, and eventually death; so that all that believed on Jesus’ efforts would have the means to get to heaven. It was the Creator’s plan, and His Son obeyed His Father.

All throughout the Bible there are many other examples of how God used unusual circumstances and events to accomplish His will. His will was not the way man would have solved the situation. In many cases, man was not even aware that there was a “situation”.

The events may not have made sense to the believers at the time, but they did as they were shown by God to do. After being obedient, sometimes they saw why they were to do as they were told; sometimes they never saw the reason. After the fact, and recorded in God’s Word, we see some of the reasons why God told them to do what they were told to do. Some of those reasons were because:

- Man’s ways do not usually work. Man often does not see the real problem, and therefore cannot fix a situation.

“There is a way which seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death.” Prov. 14:12

Also Prov. 16:25, Romans 3:16

- Man often does not know God’s way.

“... They do alway err in their heart; and they have not known my ways.” Heb. 3:10

“For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the LORD.” Isa.55:8

- God knows what the real need is in the situation. Man does not. God sees the hearts of men that needed to be changed, and knows how to change them. Man only sees the temporal needs, and cannot see the spiritual needs.

- God wants it done His way, so that He will get the credit and not man!

“... and they shall know that I am the Lord.” Ezekiel 24:27

All, even Christians, will face trials and tribulations in this world. For the non-Christians the experience may be meant to turn them to have a relationship with the Lord. For the believer the situation may be God's way of getting it done and teaching the child of God how to discern His will and way.

Christian, the next time you are in a situation you do not understand, and are convinced you are doing what you believe the Lord has directed you to do, there may be another reason you do not see. You may not know the reason, but in faith, remember that God is in control. Trust, be in much prayer over the situation, continue in faith and in doing what you have been shown to be biblically right — and wait on Him to accomplish His will and way in His timing!

“As men trim the feathers of fowls, so they do not fly too high or too far; even so doth God diminish our riches, so that we should not pass our bounds, and glory too much of the things of this world.” — Wermullerus, 1551

Wild Vines

Downname, 1644

We, who were wild branches barren of all good fruit of holiness, are through God's infinite mercy in-grafted into the true Vine, Jesus Christ, from whom we receive all our grace and sap. Once born into the family of God, we are enabled to bring forth the pleasant grapes of new obedience. Yet, if we were left alone, and suffered to run out with uncontrolled liberty, we would, like the wild vine which is never pruned, return to our old natural wildness, and bring forth no other fruit than those sour grapes of iniquity and sin. Our heavenly Vintager, for His own glory and our good, cuts away the superfluities of our licentious liberty, and prunes us with His knife of affliction, that being kept from our carnal desires, we may become more fruitful in all holy duties

"I am the true vine, and my Father is the husbandman. Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away: and every branch that beareth fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit." John 15:1, 2

"Some ships behave best in a gale. In light winds, they can rock themselves to pieces. To a Christian, adversity is not the most dangerous condition; fine weather tries him more. When we are least visibly strained, we are often most sharply tested." — Birrelli

Tighten the Reins

Wermullerus, 1551

When a horse-breaker gives a wild, young horse too much leeway on his bridle, the horse is wild, out-of-control, and may slip, fall, or hurt himself. A horsemen often jerks his horse's reins or urges the animal's sides with a firm boot to go forward. He does this not out of meanness, but that he may enjoy the horse, and that the animal may perform all he is capable of doing.

In the same way, if our Creator should give us too much liberty, we too may wax wild and may harm ourselves, physically and spiritually. This is often why the Lord gives us a sharp "bit" in our mouths, "bridles" our flesh, so that our precious soul suffers not.

"The difference between stumbling blocks and stepping stones is how you use them."

Learned Sympathy

W. M. Taylor

Harry the Eighth, wandering one night in the streets of London in disguise, was met at a bridge by some of his castle's guards. Not able to convince them of who he was, he was carried off to the jail, and shut up for the night without food, a heating fire, or a candle to light the dungeon. On his liberation, he made a grant of thirty caldrons of coal, a large quantity of bread, and candles for the night prisoners in the prison. His experience taught him sympathy.

Those who have felt sharp afflictions, terrible tragedies, and forceful temptations can be zealous in consoling those in a similar condition. Our “hard times” can be a time where our character is improved, and our new-found compassion can be used to encourage others.

“Who comforteth us in all our tribulation, that we may be able to comfort them which are in any trouble, by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God.” II Cor. 1:4

“A great number of God's best servants have trodden the depths of the valley of many shadows, and this may be so that they one day they may comfort you. The good steps of the holy are often in the Valley of Weeping.”
